Introduction

The recent enlargement to new Member States and the new Treaty of Lisbon are challenging steps forward in the development of the European Union.

Such developments, together with the achievement of a single market, require a new approach to human resources development. Today, all those aiming at top positions, both in industry and in services, need to be well versed in EU legal proceedings, in the regulations and procedures of single market, as well as in means to access EU resources.

The University Institute of European Studies (the only recognised European Documentation Centre in Piedmont) and the Centre for Studies on Federalism, supported by the Compagnia di San Paolo, has launched the fourth edition of the post-graduate programme on European economic law and competition: "Law & Business in Europe".

This Course, organised under the auspices of the University of Torino, the University of Fribourg (Switzerland), the Carlo Cattaneo University (LIUC), the Universidad de Lima, the European Training Foundation and the European Policy Centre, aims to provide young graduates and professionals with specific and practical competencies on EU regulations and markets, including competition and regional policies.

Contents and methodology

The programme is designed as an intensive workshop, combining theoretical and practical approaches. Intensive training based on problem-solving approach is what makes the Course unique. The programme comprises roughly 50 training days (including lectures, case studies, performance-oriented exercises and interaction with resource persons, tutors and fellow participants).

The programme has been designed to provide specific competencies in the field of European economic law, business and competition, such as:

- European Governance (European institutions and policies, economic freedoms, external policies, global trade and WTO relationships).
- Competition (antitrust control, multilateral relations on competition, state aids and other subsidies, public procurement, competition in services and public utilities, intellectual properties).
- Enterprises (policies and initiatives in support of enterprises, European company law, European policy for SMEs, consumer contracts, tax law).
- European Financial Support (structural funds and financial instruments in practice, European programmes and regional policy management and monitoring, EU projects, regional policy and enlargement).

Participants will also be exposed to the following subject areas:

- EU sites and data bases.
- EU recruitment procedures: the multiple choice formats to assess candidates competencies.

Assessment of participants' performance will occur during the Course through case studies, practical exercises and tests.

Graduates in Law, Business, Economics, Political Science or with equivalent qualifications and undergraduates in the final year of attendance (provided they are on schedule with their exams) may be admitted.
