LISBOAN SEMINAR

Towards a European Economic and Political Union

From the integration of the Fiscal Compact and the ESM into the Lisbon Treaty to the Eurozone as the core of Political Union

16 – 17 September 2013

Collegio Carlo Alberto
Moncalieri (TURIN)

The Lisbon Treaty, in conjunction with the Eurocrisis, has contributed to favor an institutional imbalance to the advantage of the European Council at the expense of the European Commission. The new Fiscal Compact and the European Stability Mechanism (ESM), ratified outside the Treaty's framework, have additionally increased the intergovernmental dimension of the European Union (EU)'s decision making system. At the same time, the European Central Bank (ECB) is taking the lead of the Banking Union.

How can these new Treaties and mechanisms help move towards the ultimate aim of a Political Union? Can they be effectively integrated in the current EU's political and institutional set up? Is it still realistic to believe in a Political Union?
